a. A combined AT/armored exercise was observed at the western end of the training grounds on 12 July. The moving AT unit was flank attacked by armor. The AT guns were detached from towing vehicles and placed in positions which were not dug in until the attack was beaten off. Guns were unhitched and made ready for firing on an average of 60 seconds per piece. All positions chosen were on forward slopes, which source notes is contrary to former German practice. No other combined exercises of AT and armor or infantry and armor have been seen in this area.

b. Unloaded in Gotha on 12 July: 50 artillerymen, five 100 mm AT guns M44 drawn by half-tracks, two trucks
This column moved into the wooded area one kilometer east of Wipperoda (H58), where source observed a total of twenty-two 100 mm AT guns M44.
Parked at this point were vehicles
